

THE STOCK-TAKING

The first issue of the new year is in your hands, and with this we send our readers the warmest regards and best wishes. This is also an occasion to do the home-auditing and prepare balance sheets of what was planned, what has been accomplished, and what remains to be done.

Tasks accomplished

1. We are back on the regular publication schedule.
2. The revenues have been augmented.
3. The production is better: printing mistakes are less, art paper is being used, illustrations are better, style of papers now conforms to the accepted international standards, though the cover page remains the same. Altogether, it is a new wine in old bottles.
4. Good research workers have started taking notice of the journal. The contents of this issue testify to this effect.

Tasks for future

1. Maintain what has been achieved.
2. Make efforts for further augmentation of revenues and improvement in the standard of publication.
3. Establish a stream-lined editorial office with a full time publication assistant and a business manager so as to obtain maximum efficiency at the publication and business level
4. Reorganize the editorial board and editors so as to obtain an excellence in editorial and refereeing services.

The members of the association who own this journal should debate and discuss as to how best this can be achieved, and bring forward constructive and workable solutions. Nothing can be achieved without their active participation and good-will.

S. K. MANCHANDA, M.D., P.H.D.
Executive Editor